

National Focus Areas 2013

Each year the education review team is tasked with researching and reporting on aspects of educational practice and process observed during the regular school review cycle.

In 2013 there are three national focus areas.

- The review team will continue to explore how assessment data is being used by schools
- The review team will look at the ways in which schools demonstrate awareness of the transition processes through which their students move.
- The review team will consider the nature of and use being made by schools of their annual plans.
